THURSDAY, JANUARY 7, 1875

The New York Legislature has organized by the action of Majority Speaker, Esq. George L. Kinsman, will probably be confirmed in Senate.

The Boston-Tidings trial has at last begun in Brooklyn, three Juries having been selected Tuesday. First of the committee has just received $10,000 in a sum sent against E. Muller, the former of the Brooklyn Bar.

There will be a mass meeting of Druggists of Brattleboro Jan. 21st at which all members of the order in this state, Massachusetts and New Hampshire are invited. State agent Crosby will be present to receive orders for goods.

The Legislative session has opened with a conservative majority present and anxiety is reported quiet, but the Anti-slavery bill is regarded by the U. S. troops and Prof. Sherburne has assumed command in the department. The congressional committee are continuing their investigation and affairs are in very much the same stand. Naturally enough the show of force by the general government is not pleasant to the people, generally, but it may be the only way to prevent bloodshed and disaster.

The New York Times says Governor Kellogg of Louisiana sent in his message to the Assembly presided over by Mr. Hahn. It was largely devoted to the financial condition of the state. He enumerates reductions in the funded debt amounting to $1,300,000. He says that the revenue has nearly equalled the expenses, that the taxes have been abated, and that there has been no creation of floating debt. He points out that under amendments to the constitution recommended by him and adopted, the state debt is limited to $15,000,000, taxes are limited to 12½ mills for state purposes, including schools, and the issue of state warrants in advance of revenues is forbidden. On the whole, therefore, he regards the state's financial affairs as in a better state than when he came into power. He recites the methods by which the state's funded debt has been "scaled down," and recommends that the administration of the laws on this subject be intrusted to a board composed of other than state officers, and suggests as members of such a board the Presidents of the Chamber of Commerce and Cotton Exchange and two citizens to be selected by these officers. Mr. Kellogg also, naturally, denounces with emphasis the doings of the White League.

THE SUBSIDY SYSTEM.

Probably no honest man who ever advocated the system of subsidies to private corporations will deny, in view of past occurrences, that the system has not worked well. The history of the Union Pacific subsidy was only fully written in the light of the Credit Mobilier investigation, and it was certainly a very disagreeable one. No such stock has been given to the confidence of the people in their representatives for years as that which the Credit Mobilier disclosures administered. It brought to the public notice not only the fact that here and there a Congressman would take bribes, but that the moral standard in Congress was, in many regards not before unusual, lamentably low. It was not surprising that a speculation yielding enormous profits should be attractive following amendment it was both surprising and dismaying that gentlemen of good standing and bidding that position should be unable to see that they had no right to take enormous profits out of the assets of a company heavily indebted to the Government. In the case of the Pacific Mail Company—which is the latest development of the system—there are worse features. Here there is evidence of cut and cut-throat. There has been little effort to cover up the character of the transaction. The bribees and the bribed are trying to conceal each other's identity; those who have passed the bar of eminence, are naturally afraid of the consequences of detection. But the operation as between themselves could not have been much cloaked. It must have been naked corruption. There was a show of argument and an ostentatious parade of "entertainments," but these latter only touched the fringe of the $800,000. A large part of that sum must have gone in direct bargain and sale. Possibly there might have been a thin—a very thin—veil of pretended speculation in the stock of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. But the records, so far, go to establish a clear case of open, unqualified corruption.—New York Times.

one deep and then set in a vat nine by twenty feet containing sixteen inches of cold running water. The cream when taken off is set in a vat five by ten feet where the temperature of the cream is regulated for the cheese. The last named vat is used exclusively for cheese. A barrel cheese nine feet long and three feet in diameter is used propellied by a five horse power steam engine. Forty pounds of milk is taken for one pound of butter in the early part of the season and from less milk as the season advances. Four cents per pound for making is paid, everything found after sold every week. Price paid at the factory from $10 to 17 cents per pound.

The cheese product of the factory is as follows: Cheese is made from the milk skimmed as above stated, the butter milk being mixed with the milk and the whole set for cheese in the ordinary way. Eleven pounds of this make a pound of cheese in the early part and ten pounds as the season advances. The cheese is sold at the factory at sixteen days old, average price 10 1/4 cents. $1.00 per 100 lbs. is paid for making cheese, everything found after sold every week. Price paid at the factory from $10 to 17 cents per pound.
